

Romano-British pottery found in Herefordshire

Mancetter-Hartshill mortaria

This mortarium was manufactured at Mancetter and Hartshill in present-day Warwickshire where the industry appears to have been created by a group of potters who migrated from the Verulamium area around the turn of the 1st/2nd centuries. It continued to be produced until the 4th century and has a wide distribution in the midlands and in the north of England.

This pottery is fairly common at several Romano-British sites in Herefordshire including Leintwardine, Kenchester, and Ariconium.

fabric in section

body sherd

POTSHERD : Atlas of Roman Pottery - Mancetter-Hartshill mortaria - Worcestershire fabric 32

©Woolhope Naturalists' Field Club, Herefordshire