Presidential Address 2016: A Welsh survival in the land of Pyon *by Paul Hipkins*30
Domesday Book for Herefordshire reveals a county with two distinct cultures; the English ‘shire’ north of the Wye and Archenfield to the south where Welsh influence remained strong. This address explores the evidence for early Welsh associations with the land of Pyon in mid Herefordshire.

Charters of the de Lacy family in favour of Craswall Priory *by John Freeman*43
This paper provides texts and translations of three 13th-century charters at Christ’s College, Cambridge, in which Walter de Lacy, the founder of Craswall Priory, and his son Gilbert de Lacy granted to the priory land and privileges. Other charters of the de Lacy family in favour of Craswall Priory are also summarised and discussed.

Walter II de Lacy and the foundation of Craswall Priory: the historical contexts by Joe Hillaby..62
This paper considers the activities of Walter II de Lacy in Herefordshire and Ireland between 1194 and 1231 in order to provide a chronology for Craswall foundation charters, Christ’s College, Cambridge, MSS Godshouse C and D.

Housing cattle in eastern Herefordshire and south-western Worcestershire by J. E. C. Peters.....84
The earliest provision of buildings for housing cattle were for tied animals with shelter sheds for loose cattle developing later. Most surviving buildings date from the nineteenth century although a few earlier examples have been recorded. This paper describes the styles of building found in eastern Herefordshire and south-western Worcestershire.

Augustus C. Edwards: ‘The Furrier of the West’ by John C. Eisel.....97
The drapery business founded by Augustus C. Edwards served the citizens of Herefordshire for over one hundred years. A particular specialty was the sale of furs. The site of the shop in High Town, Hereford was destroyed by fire in 2010 and remains boarded up, awaiting redevelopment.

Thomas Blashill: architectural work in Herefordshire and Shropshire *by David Whitehead*107
The work of Victorian architects in restoring medieval churches has often received critical comment. This essay adopts a revisionist view by providing a sympathetic and objective assessment of the work of Thomas Blashill in Herefordshire and Shropshire.

LIST OF COLOURED PLATES

Presidential Address 2016: A Welsh survival in the land of Pyon by Paul Hipkins

- Plate 1.1 Map of King's Pyon and Canon Pyon.
1.2 Map of area referred to in the Wormsley charters.

Charters of the de Lacy family in favour of Craswall Priory by John Freeman

- Plate 2.1 Charter of the de Lacy family in favour of Craswall Priory, Cambridge, Christ's College, MS Godshouse C.
2.2 Charter of the de Lacy family in favour of Craswall Priory, Cambridge, Christ's College, MS Godshouse D.
2.3 Charter in favour of Craswall Priory, Cambridge, Christ's College, MS Godshouse B, with Walter de Lacy's seal.

Walter II de Lacy and the foundation of Craswall Priory: the historical contexts by Joe Hillaby

- Plate 3.1 Trim Castle, built by Walter's father, 1174-86. Fundamentally a square keep to which four rectangular towers were subsequently attached. These are shown projecting above the keep.
3.2 Walter de Lacy and the triumph of circularity, c. 1220: Trim Castle from the south, showing curtain wall with four of his five circular towers and the Dublin Gate. Note the formidable circular inner structure.
3.3 Pembroke Castle. William Marshal's 75-ft high circular keep showing remains of domical roof and heavy battery at base.
3.4 Pembroke Castle overlooking the port for Ireland.
3.5 View from Dundrum keep bay overlooking the bay and fine natural harbour, Mountains of Mourne in distance.
3.6 Longtown Castle on its motte, viewed from the south, showing two of the three semi-circular buttresses.
3.7 Clogh Oughter castle: the south wall was blown up by Cromwell's forces in 1653, when it was the last stronghold of the rebellion to fall. Thus the internal layout can now be seen. Only the ground and first floors were built by Walter de Lacy.
3.8 Clogh Oughter castle from the north showing the intact section of the wall.

Thomas Blashill: architectural work in Herefordshire and Shropshire by David Whitehead

- Plate 4.1 Westhide School (1863): classroom left (heightened), master's house right.
4.2 Yarkhill School (1866): Blashill's drawing of the east gable—the rose window contains painted glass by Henry Casolani.
4.3 Tarrington School (1874): No polychrome brickwork here, Lady Emily probably insisted upon something more sober and classical.
4.4 The Millbank Estate (1897-1902): Blashill's crowning achievement, again expensive architecture set in tree-line boulevards, which could easily be mistaken for nearby Chelsea.
4.5 Hereford Town Hall, The 'Imperial' staircase: Doulton's best terracotta, York stone, black marble columns and top-lit with Art Nouveau stained glass—posh qualities that would elevate any bride's wedding day.

Archaeology, 2016 by Ron Shoesmith

- Plate 5.1 Credenhill. The stages in construction of the south-facing wall (horizon 060 represent the rubble core of the wall whereas 099 represents the industrial trample layer into which the wall was constructed.
- 5.2 Credenhill. Results of the resistivity survey depicting the location of the Romano-British farmstead/villa within the roughly-rectangular, ditched enclosure.
- 5.3 Hereford, 16-18 High Town. General view of walls in the south-west corner of the site.
- 5.4 Hereford Cathedral, south aisle. Probable revetment wall associated with Wyatt's repairs to the cathedral.
- 5.5 Bromyard Downs, Operational Base 1. The entrance-shaft remains showing the concrete beams lining the shaft which is cut into bedrock.
- 5.6 Dorstone Hill. The eastern mound (centre, left) and deep burial chamber (right) viewed from the south.
- 5.7 Longtown. Aerial photograph showing the two trenches in relation to the castle.
- 5.8 Ponthendre. Aerial photograph showing trenches 2 and 3 in relation to the earthworks of the castle. Trench 1 is seen among the trees on top of the motte.
- 5.9 Adforton. Second-century Roman Trola (pan-handle).
- 5.10 Dinedor. Neolithic axehead (Scandinavian type).
- 5.11 Foy. Gilded silver coins of Elizabeth 1.
- 5.12 Madley. Medieval seal matrix.

Botany, 2016 by Peter Garner

- Plate 6.1 Yellow Nonea (Nonea lutea).
- 6.2 Moth Mullein (Verbascum blattaria).
- 6.3 Strawberry Clover (Trifolium fragiferum).
- 6.4 Orange Mullein (Verbascum phlomoides) at Rotherwas.

Geology, 2016 by Moirra Jenkins

- Plate 7.1 Little Doward. A shale horizon is overlain by massive dolomite. This is the boundary of the Avon Group and the Black Rock Limestone.
- 7.2 Great Doward. Algal mats of cyanobacteria.
- 7.3 Great Doward. Drybrook Sandstone, orange sandstone with quartz pebbles.
- 7.4 Intra-formational conglomerate in the Freshwater West Formation, containing pebbles of sandstone and calcrete.
- 7.5 Red Daren. Ffynnon Limestone with nodules of calcium carbonate seen on the cliff face.
- 7.6 Hummocky landscape of the landslip area at Black Darren.
- 7.7 Gastropod found at Chance's Pitch, seen from above.

Augustus C. Edwards: 'The Furrier of the West' by John C. Eisel

Fig.	1	This engraving, dating from the early 1860s when George Pember was trading from 18 High Town, indicates that at that period the shop front was of a plain Georgian style.	98
	2	Another engraving, taken from Hereford Illustrated (1892), illustrates the frontage after Augustus Edwards had taken over nos. 16 & 17 High Town.	99
	3	When Jakeman and Carver's trade directory was published in 1902, Edwards had a large advert inside the rear cover, with an illustration of a polar bear.	100
	4	An advertising postcard, issued by Augustus Edwards to illustrate his extensive range of furs.	100
	5	Although this photograph is undated, it was taken about the time that the alterations to the premises were begun in 1933.	102
	6	When Queen Mary visited Hereford on 29 July 1937, she was driven through the centre of the city. This fine photograph, taken from an elevated position on the opposite side of High Town, shows the frontage to the 'Furriers of the West' nearing completion.	103
	7	This photograph, taken on 13 September 1948 during Battle of Britain week, has the completed front of 16-18 High Town as the backdrop to the Spitfire on display.	104

Thomas Blashill: architectural work in Herefordshire and Shropshire by David Whitehead

Fig. 1	Yarkhill church (1861-2). A presentation lithograph showing before and after views of the church. 108
2	Oldbury near Bridgnorth (1863). Blashill's bell-cote on the west end of the church. 109
3	Westhide Church (1866-7). View of the south-side where Blashill consolidated the masonry, opened-up the easternmost window and designed a new porch. The tower was restored in c. 1870. 113
4	Stottesdon Church (1867-8). The new baptistery designed by Blashill to show-off the font. A new ox-eye window was provided to illuminate the scene. 116
5	Lady Emily Foley (1805-1900) a portrait of 1840. Her patronage sustained Blashill's career in Herefordshire. She was the daughter of James Graham, 3rd duke of Montrose and wife of the Hon. Edward Foley (d. 1846). 117
6	Putley Church (1875). Blashill renewed the belfry and strengthen the west wall for support. He added the west window. The timber porch shown by Wathen was also restored but was replaced in c. 1940. 118
7	Dormington (1876-7). Blashill's perspective (framed) is still in the church. 120
8	Dormington (1876-7). Blashill kept the narrow chancel arch and changed the east window to five lancets. The fine Arts and Crafts glass, depicting the Last Supper, is by Mary Lowndes and Isabel Gloag (1902). 121
9	Much Dewchurch (1877). Blashill's new north arcade can be seen on the left. The chancel, which had been improved earlier, was provided with a new iron palisade and gates, Godwin tiles and new oak fittings. The pulpit was 're-fixed' and the roof of the nave revealed and restored. 125
10	Hampton Bishop (1878-9). The north side of the church, showing the tower, restored by both Kempson (1866) and Blashill (1878). The third storey with its 'Norman' openings was designed by Blashill. He also cleaned and restored the stonework below. 127
11	Boundary Street, Bethnal Green (1890-93). One of the quiet green corners on the estate, surrounded by tall tenements, providing working class housing in a style of architecture which would not be out-of-place in the West End. 129
